

Journal of Environmental Law

Volume 33 Number 3 November 2021

CONTENTS

Commentary: Different Voices, Different Knowledges

The Delicate Task of Including Different Voices in Environmental Law

Making in India

Arpitha Kodiveri

495

Fiction as Legal Method—Imagining with the More-than-Human to

Awaken Our Plural Selves

Michelle Lim

501

Using Sound Science Responsibly: Stories from the Scottish Seas and

Hills

Colin T. Reid

507

Revisiting Missed Opportunities: A Self-Reflection on (Not Always)

Writing Meaningfully

Duncan French

513

Environmental Law, Scholarship, and Epistemic Responsibility

Liz Fisher

521

Articles

Rights of Nature in Practice: A Case Study on the Impacts of the

Colombian Atrato River Decision

Philipp Wesche

531

Compensation Funds as a Remedial Mechanism for Victims of Corporate

Pollution in Kenya: A Feasibility Study

Rosemary Mwanza

557

Temperature Targets and State Obligations on the Mitigation of Climate

Change

Benoit Mayer

585

From Extra-Territorial Leverage and Transnational Environmental

Protection to Distortions of Competition: The Level Playing Field in the

EU-UK Trade and Cooperation Agreement

Giulia Claudia Leonelli

611

Megafauna Rewilding: Addressing Amnesia and Myopia in Biodiversity Law and Policy Arie Trouwborst	639
Improving Energy Efficiency: The Significance of Normativity Elizabeth A. Kirk and Laurel Besco	669
Analysis
The First Climate Judgment before the Norwegian Supreme Court: Aligning Law with Politics Christina Voigt	697
Climate Disruption in Canadian Constitutional Law: References Re Greenhouse Gas Pollution Pricing Act Jocelyn Stacey	711
A Duty to Care: The Case of Sharma v Minister for the Environment [2021] FCA 560 Jacqueline Peel and Rebekkah Markey-Towler	727
Significant Law Cases
Significant International Environmental Law Developments: 2020–2021 James Harrison	737
Review Article
A Review in Three Haikus Emily Barritt	747

The Delinquent in Environmental Law

It was a warm afternoon in Odisha in the sun, whether Dalit or not, called the Forest Rights Act discuss in more detail that Dalit forest dwellers who were predominantly Dalit communities. When I discuss as follows:

This is a mix of Dalit and Hindu. We are discussing areas untouchable extends to a

Dalit literally means its exclusionary equality²—a group of castes placed in that they are believed to be inferior. Practices are said to be unclean

* Postdoctoral Research Fellow

1 Interview with

2 BR Ambedkar,

3 ibid.